

Hailing 'slowness & silence'

Robert Wilson held a lecture in SND in Bratislava. Source: Courtesy of Pavleye Art and Culture

14 Apr 2014 | Zuzana Viliková | Culture & Society

IT DOES not often occur that one man comes before a sold-out Slovak National Theatre (SND) in Bratislava and holds the audience's attention for nearly three hours. But Robert Wilson is not your average entertainer or theatre-maker. In fact, finding the right words to describe him can be difficult, which is perhaps what brought so many people to this event, called '1. Have You Been There? 2. No, This Is the First Time.'

The rest of this article is premium content and is only accessible with a PIANO account.

If you want to access the rest of this article, and all other premium content on websites that are part of the PIANO system, you can do so by subscribing to PIANO for only 1,39 euro a week.

KEEP UP TO DATE ON EVENTS IN SLOVAKIA - as part of your PIANO subscription, you will have a PDF version of every issue of our newspaper, The Slovak Spectator, emailed directly to you (45 issues a year).

The Slovak Spectator is now part of PIANO, a premium content gateway that, for €3.90 a month, gives you immediate access to premium content and services on the biggest Slovak news websites. By joining the PIANO network we've been able to lower our prices for access to our premium content, and at the same time give our readers access to the locked content offered by other Slovak publishers and television stations who are also part of the PIANO network.

An advertisement for Living.Spectator.SK. It features a search bar with the text "A new home in a few clicks away" and a "Find" button. A yellow sticky note is placed over the search bar with the handwritten text: "There are a million offers... I just can't choose. Why don't you look?" The Living.Spectator.SK logo is at the bottom.